

Kikkoman Institute for International Food Culture

The Kikkoman Institute for International Food Culture provides information on the food cultures of Japan and other countries through panel exhibitions and seminars with invited experts from various fields. Books and historical materials related to foods and food cultures in its collections are also open to the public. Our digital data search system has been upgraded to enable more efficient access to these materials.

Kikkoman Institute for International Food Culture Logo

This logo was designed with the images of rice and wheat, two of the world's three major grains, with deep connections to the food cultures of Japan and the world, inside a turtle-shell design. The turtle-shell design is a deep purple, representing soy sauce. The grains, abundant with their fruits, are a gold color.

To support research into the food cultures of East Asia, the Kikkoman Institute for International Food Culture is an active and supporting member of the German East Asian Arts Council.
